▶ PEACEMAKING

- Peacemaking is a traditional way of practicing restorative justice, though Peacemaking is still evolving as tribes themselves evolve.
- Peacemaking can be most simply described as a process where people can talk together to resolve conflict. Though, it is not one size fits all. It is a cultural practice that varies in each tribe.
- Peacemaking is a community-based process that addresses the concerns of all interested parties.
- Peacemaking is about more than just resolving conflict, it's also about preventing conflict.
- Peacemaking is really hard work, and there are no shortcuts. But the hard work is what makes it good work.

▶ RESTORATIVE JUSTICE

- Restorative justice (RJ) is an approach to justice that attempts to restore harm at its roots.
- RJ can take many forms, but it ultimately prioritizes community safety.
- RJ views harm as a community issue—a harm to one person is a harm to the entire community.
- Accountability from the perpetrator of harm is necessary.
- RJ is directly derived from Indigenous peoples and tribes' traditional ways of practicing justice.

▶ RESTORATIVE JUSTICE PRINCIPLES

1. Crime (or harm) is a violation of people (including the perpetrator of harm) and relationships.
2. Victims and the community are central to the justice process.
3. A primary focus of a justice process is to assist victims and address needs.
4. The secondary focus is restoring the community to the degree possible.
5. All human beings have dignity and worth.

How Restorative Justice Works

PEACEMAKING AND CIRCLES

The General Circle Format

Why is Peacemaking Important?

WHY IS PEACEMAKING IMPORTANT?

▶ WHY DOES RJ AND PEACEMAKING MATTER?

- Tribes are currently the leaders in RJ.
- Historically, tribal RJ has been intentionally limited by the federal government as a means of eliminating tribal sovereignty.
- RJ and Peacemaking is a way for tribes to practice tribal sovereignty and self-determination.
- Restorative justice/Peacemaking gets to the root of harm caused in communities by healing and restoring the perpetrator of harm, the person harmed, and the entire community.
- For Tribal Healing to Wellness Courts, this looks like healing those with substance use disorder (SUD) at its root.

DISCUSSION QUESTION:

WHEN COULD PEACEMAKING HAVE BEEN HELPFUL IN YOUR COMMUNITY/WORK?
HOW MIGHT IT HAVE LOOKED?

How Does Peacemaking Fit into HTWCs?

Tribal Law & Policy Institute
www.Home.TLPI.org

▶ RJ AND TRIBAL HEALING TO WELLNESS COURTS (HTWCs)

- Restorative justice is the foundation for HTWCs.
- Wellness Courts were implemented by tribes to address the prevalence of maladaptive drug use in their communities.
- Tribes saw that the Western adversarial criminal legal system was not getting to the root of the reason why maladaptive drug use was prevalent in their communities.
- Tribes saw that historical/generational trauma, childhood trauma, and other issues specific to Native people were often the cause of SUD in their communities.

▶ RJ AND TRIBAL HEALING TO WELLNESS COURTS (HTWCs)

- Tribes saw that these root issues that were specific to Native people needed solutions that were specific to target them—solutions rooted in each tribe’s culture, spirituality, and knowledge.
- Tribes turned to the therapeutic and restorative justice found in Drug Courts, but implemented their own culture and values into the process.
- Today HTWCs integrate traditional concepts of healing and community involvement toward healing, rather than punishing, their addicted tribal members.
- This is restorative justice in action. Bringing Peacemaking in HTWCs can expand restorative justice function of HTWCs.
